TEXAS KILLING FIELDS

Synopsis

Inspired by true events, this tense and haunting thriller follows Detective Souder (Sam Worthington), a homicide detective in a small Texan town, and his partner, transplanted New York City cop Detective Heigh (Jeffrey Dean Morgan) as they track a sadistic serial killer dumping his victims' mutilated bodies in a nearby marsh locals call "The Killing Fields."

Though the swampland crime scenes are outside their jurisdiction, Detective Heigh is unable to turn his back on solving the gruesome murders. Despite his partner's warnings, he sets out to investigate the crimes. Before long, the killer changes the game and begins hunting the detectives, teasing them with possible clues at the crime scenes while always remaining one step ahead. When familiar local girl Anne (Chloë Grace Moretz) goes missing, the detectives find themselves racing against time to catch the killer and save the young girl's life.

Directed by Ami Canaan Mann, Produced by Michael Mann and Michael Jaffe, Texas Killing Fields also stars Jessica Chastain (Tree of Life, The Help), Jason Clarke (Public Enemies, FOX's "Chicago Code") and Stephen Graham (Pirates of the Caribbean: On Stranger Tides, HBO's "Boardwalk Empire"). Story Origins

While working on assignment for the DEA, Don Ferrarone was sent to Texas City, Texas to form a task force addressing trafficking issues. While there working with local law enforcement, Don began to hear about the phenomenon of crime locals called The Texas Killing Fields—several areas of land running along the I-45 just outside Texas City limits where, since 1969, over fifty bodies of sexual assault murder victims have been dumped. Having never heard of these crimes, Don became curious and began asking questions. Everyone he spoke to directed him to two Texas City PD Detectives who'd worked several of the Texas Killing Fields' cases, Brian Goetschius and Mike Land.

The three men became close. They still are close. And a shared interest in the unsolved crimes of the Texas Killing Fields led Don Ferrarone into a multitude of case histories, meeting victims' families, meeting survivors, an understanding of the peculiarities of The Killing Fields as well as the methodologically oppositional, but shared core values, of the two detectives themselves.

In 2000, Don Ferrarone had retired from the DEA and was interested in pursuing writing. Having worked with Michael Mann on several earlier projects, dating back to 1990's Emmy-winning mini-series "Drug Wars: The Camarena Story,” Michael commissioned Don to write the screenplay ‘Texas Killing Fields’ which, some ten years later, was shot in May 2010.

Director’s Statement

On the outskirts of a small town called Texas City, thirty minutes south of Houston, the bodies of just under sixty murder victims have been found. Some women, some girls. Some prostitutes. Some schoolchildren. All victims of different killers.

In the stacks of preliminary research that came with Don Ferrarone’s brilliant screenplay, I found a map attached to a local newspaper article. It showed the faces of the victims near where their bodies were found. Seventies Marsha Brady straight hair, eighties bangs, nineties streaks. Decades of girls waking up on the mornings of their last days, doing their makeup and hair, never knowing that the images they saw in the mirror would remain on a victims map I’d be staring at years later. Many of the photos are school photos. Eyes looking directly at the camera the way we’re told to smile during ‘picture day.’ Arranged as they are on that map, they’re a tapestry of beautiful ghosts, their eyes look right through you, asking for voice. And it is this reality, I believe, that pushed myself, cast and crew to try to tell this tough story in the most elegant way possible. How to tell their story? How to try to give voice to those whose voice has been taken?

Director Q&A

Q: What did your preparation entail?

Preparation entailed research into as many of the aspects of the story as possible. I spent time with Homicide Detectives of the LASD, went to the LA morgue, spent time in Texas City, went to various state and local prisons in Louisiana. And then, during prep, Sam, Jeffrey, Jessica did the same. The depth and breadth of the actors’ commitment to the research on this film was incredible. Chloë, James and Sheryl spent time at a meth safe house interviewing former users to understand that subculture. Jason Clarke spent time in Texas City with a former sex offender to understand that reality.

Though the specific crimes portrayed in the film are an amalgamated fictionalization of various aspects of the fifty some odd Texas Killing Fields cases, all of us were well aware that we were telling a story that was, at the deepest level, inspired by very real, very tough events. For the cast, myself and the crew, the idea was to respect that reality by trying to understand it as best we could. And, if we could manage to capture even some qualities of the Texas Killing Fields story authentically and compellingly, perhaps we could help draw some attention to the many cases in that remain unsolved.

Q: Please explain any techniques used to portray certain characters in a specific manner. For example, Lucie is a person for whom you are unsure if you should feel sorry for or not. Anne is obviously too mature for her age. How do you accomplish this?

I was incredibly lucky to have such an astute and talented cast. They deserve all the credit for nuance in the portrayal of their characters.

My feeling was that Lucie at one point in her life was a beautiful girl with a sense of hope and promise. Sheryl did an incredible job of letting us get a glimpse of who that girl was, even as we see on-screen the woman and the mother she'd become. Anne is too mature for her age, but she also lacks cynicism totally. Chloë took that to the core in her portrayal. You never get the sense that Anne is aware of how bad her circumstances are. If you did, you'd no longer feel for her as strongly as you do.

Q: Is there something you respect about or feel empathy for in regards to the people portrayed in this film?

Absolutely. I respect and feel deep empathy for all the characters. None of us are all bad or all good. In life, every day, we all make choices because we believe they are the right choices to make. So, the question becomes: why do certain people make the choices they do? How do they get there? What are their criteria? My sense is that asking those questions can make for interesting storytelling.

Q: Landscape plays a large role in Texas Killing Fields. How did you use that to help tell the story?

The actual Killing Fields are large tracks of land just outside Texas City where the bodies have been found and which are known collectively as the Texas Killing Fields. One of the things that struck me when we went to some of the crime scenes was that most of them were within view of a row of refineries and just a few miles out of town. So there was something about the crime scenes that felt like a haunted house to me – a frightening place just down the road from the familiar. Strange things happen there. We don't know why. We're curious, we're also terrified.

When my sister, Aran Reo Mann, the Production Designer, and I began initial location scouting in Louisiana, we came across these vast areas marked by strange, skeletal trees. They were beautiful and haunting. We were told they were the remains of what used to be dense forest, but the rising seawater caused by global warming had allowed salt water to permeate into the ground water and slowly kill the forests off. Only the skeletal trees remained. The trees struck me as being both beautiful and tragic. They became the signature visual image of the Killing Fields.

Q: Who were your inspirations in filmmaking? How did they help inspire you in making this film?

The most inspirational elements were the real events that inspired Don's story; the victims, the town, the perpetrators and detectives themselves. We were all inspired, I believe, by the story of two very different men and a girl who draws them in. And the chance that perhaps, in even a modest way, the chance to help give voice to those from whom voice had been taken.

Q: What message do you want people to get from watching this film?

Pay attention.

Q: Please tell us about your history in filmmaking and what inspired you to become a director.

I grew up in Dayton, Indiana where film was just not a frame of reference. Nor were books, except between my mother and myself. Or television. The common frame of reference was the town itself and the neighbors and the stories. And the things we saw and heard and knew as only kids can know things. We had those sometimes beautiful, sometimes terrifying, events in silent common.

The first involvement I had in my father's work was on his television show 'Crime Story'. He was shooting The Last of the Mohicans at the time. I worked as a Production Assistant in the Art Department. I was sixteen and got paid $40 a week which, to me, seemed like a small fortune. It was transformational. I fell completely in love with filmmaking.

Essentially, the experience of growing up in Indiana inspired me to want to tell stories. The experience of working with my father on his films and television shows inspired me to see how those stories could be told.

Cast Bios

SAM WORTHINGTON – 'Mike'

Sam Worthington graduated from Sydney's prestigious National Institute of Dramatic Art (NIDA) in 1998. Upon graduation, he continued in the theater with a production of "Judas Kiss," directed by Neil Armfield, for Company B at the Belvoir Street Theater.

With smaller roles in international films such as Hart's War, The Great Raid and Rogue under his belt, Worthington screen tested opposite Daniel Craig for the role of James Bond in Casino Royale. Although he did not land the much-coveted part, it proved to be the perfect dress rehearsal for the following year. After an exhaustive casting search, James Cameron hand-picked Worthington to star in Avatar – Cameron's first narrative film since his 1997 Oscar®-winning blockbuster Titanic. Avatar is now the #1 highest grossing film of all time with $2.74 billion worldwide. Avatar received several nominations for the 2010 Academy Awards® including "Best Picture" and "Best Directing" for James Cameron's work in the film. The film won 2010 Golden Globe Awards in the "Best Motion Picture–Drama" category as well as for "Best Director." James Cameron was nominated for a 2010 DGA Feature Film Award for the film.

Recently, Worthington shot Clash of the Titans 2, where he will return as Perseus, the Demigod attempting to live a quieter life as a village fisherman but is unable ignore his true calling. The film is set to be released in March 2012.

Worthington was seen in John Madden's The Debt alongside Helen Mirren. The film tells a post-World War II story of three Mossad agents confronted years later by their scandal-ridden past.

Worthington most recently wrapped filming Summit Entertainment's thriller Man On A Ledge alongside Ed Harris, and Elizabeth Banks. The film centers on an ex-cop turned con who threatens to jump to his death from a Manhattan hotel rooftop in an attempt to cover up the biggest diamond heist ever pulled.

The film is slated to be released in January 2012.

Worthington is signed on to star in Drift, which is set in the 70's and follows two brothers who helped kick-start the modern surf industry.

Worthington last appeared in the character-driven drama Last Night opposite Keira Knightley, in which the fidelity of both a husband and wife is tested over the course of 36 hours.

Worthington was also seen as the lead role of Perseus in Warner Brothers' Clash of the Titans, which has grossed $491 million worldwide.

In 2009, Worthington starred opposite Christian Bale in Warner Brothers' much-anticipated prequel to the Terminator franchise, Terminator Salvation. The film grossed $370 million worldwide. Coincidentally, James Cameron wrote and directed the first two installments of the Terminator films – The Terminator and Terminator 2: Judgment Day.

Building upon his theater background, Worthington has continued to work steadily in both film and television. He made his feature film debut with the Australian film Bootmen, in which he played Adam Garcia's brooding older brother. His performance garnered him an Australian Film Institute (AFI) Award Nomination for "Best Performance by an Actor in a Leading Role" in 2000. Additional Australian film credits include Dirty Deeds with John Goodman, Toni Collette and Sam Neill; Gettin' Square with David Wenham; and Geoffrey Wright's (Romper Stomper) contemporary adaptation of Macbeth in which he played the title character. It was Worthington's layered performance in Cate Shortland's critically-acclaimed and commercially successful Somersault which distinguished him from his peers. He earned an AFI Award for "Best Actor in a Leading Role" and a Film Critics Circle of Australia (FCCA) Nomination for "Best Actor–Male" in 2004. The film made a clean sweep of the AFI Awards, winning in all 13 film categories—the first time this had ever occurred in the award's history.

Worthington's television credits include some of Australia's most acclaimed productions: "Love My Way," which won an AFI for "Best Television Drama Series," and "The Surgeon," which was nominated for an AFI for "Best Telefeature or Miniseries." Morgan also stars in Lionsgate's upcoming horror feature Dibbuk Box. The story centers on a recently divorced father (Morgan) whose youngest daughter becomes strangely connected to an antique wooden box that the two purchase at a yard sale. As his daughter's behavior becomes more erratic, the father senses a dark presence building and finally discovers that the box was built to contain a dislocated spirit called a dibbuk, which inhabits and ultimately devours its human host. Kyra Sedgwick also stars, with famed horror master Sam Raimi producing. Lionsgate, who made its mark in the genre with the Saw franchise, will release the film in January 2012.

Also in the can is MGM/UA's upcoming reboot of the 1984 action movie Red Dawn. The plot focuses on a group of teenagers who form an insurgency called the Wolverines, when Chinese and Russian soldiers invade their town. Morgan fills the role of Lieutenant Andrew Tanner, leader of the U.S. Special Forces who finds the Wolverines.

The in-demand actor was on location in upstate New York last year, filming the independent feature Peace, Love, & Misunderstanding alongside Catherine Keener and Jane Fonda, for director Bruce Beresford (Driving Miss Daisy). The story revolves around conservative lawyer Diane (Keener), who brings her son and daughter to visit their estranged, hippie grandmother, Grace (Fonda) in Woodstock, New York after her husband asks her for a divorce. Morgan stars as Jude, a musician and carpenter who falls in love with Diane. The ensemble cast also includes Chace Crawford, Rosanna Arquette and Kyle MacLachlan.

Following Peace, Love, & Misunderstanding, Morgan completed production on Arclight Films' The Courier, for which he both starred in and executive produced. The film, written by Derek Haas and Michael Brandt (the team who wrote Wanted, 3:10 to Yuma), is about a daredevil courier (Morgan), well known for taking on impossible missions and never missing a drop. His newest job is to deliver a briefcase to a notorious underworld figure who can't be found, all while being pursued by corrupt cops, double-crossing feds, and rival crime bosses. The film was directed by Hany-Aby, who helmed the Oscar®-nominated foreign film Paradise Now.

Last year, he starred in the feature The Losers, an adaptation of DC-Vertigo's acclaimed comic book series about a band of black ops commandos who are set up to be killed by their own government. The team barely survives and sets out to get even. Morgan played the role of Clay, the leader of the group. The film was produced by Joel Silver and directed by Sylvain White.

Earlier this year, Morgan starred in the suspense thriller The Resident opposite two-time Academy Award winner Hilary Swank for Hammer Films. It is the story of a young doctor (Swank) who moves into a Brooklyn loft and becomes suspicious that she is not alone. Morgan plays the role of Max, her charming new landlord who she discovers has developed a dangerous obsession with her. Morgan previously co-starred with Swank in Warner Bros.' P.S. I Love You.

Additional feature credits include The Accidental Husband opposite Uma Thurman, a cameo role alongside Rachel Weisz in Warner Bros.' comedy Fred Claus, and the independent office comedy Kabluey, in which he played a charismatic yet smarmy co-worker to Lisa Kudrow's character.

Morgan endeared himself to audiences with his recurring role on ABC's hit series "Grey's Anatomy." His dramatic arc as heart patient Denny Duquette, who wins the heart of intern Izzie Stevens (Katherine Heigl) in a star-crossed romance, made him a universal fan favorite. He also had recurring roles on the CW and Warner Bros.' drama series, "Supernatural," and on Showtime and Lionsgate's award-winning comedy series, "Weeds."

In his spare time, Morgan enjoys barbecuing on the grill, reading, watching movies and listening to his favorite band, The Eagles. His orchestral arrangements became a distinguishing feature of the band's recordings. From 1993 to 2005, Tindersticks released six critically acclaimed studio albums (the first of which was Melody Maker's Album of the Year) as well as two live albums and two soundtrack albums on Island Records and Beggars Banquet. They toured internationally and have a following throughout the world.

Dickon began scoring films with the acclaimed French director Claire Denis when she approached Tindersticks to write the scores to her films Nenette et Boni and Trouble Every Day, which starred Vincent Gallo and Beatrice Dalle. This was followed by Vendredi Soir, which was Dickon's first solo film score and attracted the attention of the American film maker Ira Sachs, who asked him to compose the music for Forty Shades of Blue. The film won the Grand Jury prize at the Sundance Film Festival in 2005. Later that year Dickon wrote a very different kind of score and a song for the British feature film Keeping Mum, a black comedy directed by Niall Johnson, featuring Maggie Smith, Rowan Atkinson, Kristin Scott-Thomas and Patrick Swayze. This was followed by another film with Ira Sachs, the period drama Married Life, which starred Pierce Brosnan, Chris Cooper and Rachel McAdams.

His next film was the Golden Globe nominated romantic drama Last Chance Harvey, directed by Joel Hopkins, starring Dustin Hoffman and Emma Thompson. This was closely followed by the New York based, surreal drama Cold Souls, which premiered in competition at the 2009 Sundance Film Festival. The film starred Paul Giamatti, Emily Watson and Dina Korzun and was directed by Sophie Barthes. He then scored the highly acclaimed Red Riding-1980, directed by James Marsh (Man on Wire).

Last year, Dickon completed the music for the American film Winter's Bone, directed by Debra Granik. The movie was nominated for four Oscars® including Best Picture. The film won the Grand Jury prize at the Sundance Film Festival in 2010. He has recently scored Mitch Glazer's Passion Play (starring Mickey Rourke, Bill Murray and Megan Fox) and he is currently finishing the score to Oren Moverman's Rampart (Woody Harrelson, Ben Foster, Sigourney Weaver), scripted by James Ellroy and will soon be working on the score to James Marsh's upcoming thriller Shadow Dancer (Clive Owen, Andrea Riseborough, Gillian Anderson).
